COLLEGE REPORT June 1976 / Volume 29 Number 6

SEVEN YEARS LATER!

No college administration can review a seven-year span without being newly impressed by the necessity of team effort. The main purpose of administration is to create favorable opportunities for learning and teaching to take place. With strong trustee policy-making and support, an administration which works together can create these opportunities, but only work and will on the part of faculty and students can make an institution truly deserve the title, "a house of learning."

A number of institutions in our day continue to demonstrate, by negative example, the truth of the rule that "financial viability must precede academic accomplishment." Put another way, academic programs without fiscal undergirding produce only flimsy window-dressing--and academic death. Fortunately, Lycoming College today presents a lively illustration of both fiscal and academic health.

In the fall of 1969, Lycoming was still trying to recover from a deluge of short-term notes which had been executed in order to finish construction of the Academic Center in 1968. This burdensome form of indebtedness, approximating $1,300,000, lay heavily upon an institution which had been forced to demolish its current operating reserve funds to pay the contractors for work in progress during 1967-68.

In addition, analysis of the academic programs at the time showed too many costly areas already in existence, excessive faculty staffing--and an elaborate academic plan to expand programs and faculty still further in the direction of fiscal irresponsibility!

Fortunately, these past seven years have been characterized by realistic academic planning based upon careful analysis of the institution's financial resources. The Middle States Association's evaluation in 1970 gave the institution a clean bill of health and pointed to the need for still further careful planning in the light of our fiscal resources. The Board of Trustees had already, in 1968, passed a resolution prohibiting further construction, or other significant expenditures, until the funds for any project should be in hand or clearly in sight.

The college has experienced several good years since 1969. High level enrollments and significant gifts (and bequests) from friends of the institution have enabled us to retire the short-term indebtedness and to accumulate small operating reserves. Operating reserves are neither well understood nor appreciated by most faculty and staff. They find it almost impossible to comprehend the necessity of an institutional "savings account" when they see so close at hand opportunities for increasing their own salaries and spending all available dollars on their pet programs. Those of us who bear the final responsibility for financing the institution, however, fully appreciate both the safety factor in a reserve fund and the income which these investments produce to help finance critical academic operations.

My colleagues and I have been most disappointed that we were not able to move into construction of a physical education and recreation center. Our monetary goal was $3,000,000. We could see a strong possibility of present college building funds plus a campaign yielding $1,750,000, but we were unable to secure the $1,250,000 in large advance gifts which would assure construction. Planning toward this project could not be begun until approximately three years ago. During the first few years that I was employed by Lycoming College, we were in a financially precarious position trying to pay off short-term (high interest) debts incurred by the construction of the Academic Center. At the same time, we were adjusting the inflated academic program to fiscally realistic controls. Still further, we were sure that operational reserve funds must be rebuilt in order to give the institution a chance in the future.

Seven years ago the college had a badly divided faculty and administration, a situation which had grown up (under definite encouragement) over the course of three or more years. Negative human relations such as this do not heal easily nor do they produce the most effective academic atmosphere. Critical tension between faculty and administration is traditional in most institutions and may be productive in moderation, but the Lycoming development had split faculty from faculty and had left many students lost in a political no-man's-land. The future of this institution will depend in part upon the continuation of the healing process, under the leadership of persons who are integrative rather than divisive in their adjustments.

It is unfortunate that the last three years, when the college was adjusting from its early 70's enrollment to its smaller late 70's figure, did not permit retention of the faculty-staff size of 1972. Reductions in positions, although carried forward with maximum consultation, fairness, and notice, produced predictable "hard feelings." This interfered with the healing process and tended to fix blame for all the institution's problems upon the administration.

Many of our faculty and staff have grown up during unrelieved "good times" and have come to regard as natural (or their right) increased opportunity and pay each year. Some of our colleagues still suffer from "the university syndrome" of the middle and late sixties. Although this was termed a "revolution" by some observers, to others of us it was in large part a rebellion against natural social and economic limitations. Unfortunately, the "syndrome" left many of its victims still attributing all of the institution's (and the world's) problems to a single cause (the administration, the establishment, the company, business, or whatever).

Admissions Report

Frank Kamus, Director of Admissions, and his three assistants, Tony Schepis, Pat Stalgatis and Nick Green look happier and more relaxed than usual this spring. Perhaps it is because the nagging decline in admissions that has plagued Lycoming the last few years has been reversed.

On May 26, Frank reported 414 confirmed admissions, compared with 293 on the same date a year ago. While it is difficult to explain why more students applied, were accepted and will enroll, it is nevertheless an encouraging development. The admissions staff visited a few more high schools than usual, and a number of alumni were very helpful in the recruiting effort. In addition, Rob Curry and the coaches were actively involved in recruiting student-athletes for several sports.

We appreciate the assistance of those alumni who referred prospective students to us, and those who sponsored open houses in their communities. The end result is gratifying and we trust we can count on this sort of loyalty in future years.

New Scholarships for United Methodist Students

The College recently announced the approval of Youth Appreciation Scholarships for prospective students who are members of the Central Pennsylvania Conference of The United Methodist Church. Beginning with the fall term, 1976, Lycoming will match local church funds up to a maximum of $1,000 per pastoral charge to provide scholarships for full-time students. The scholarship may be designated by the church for one student, or it may be shared by two or more designated students from the same church. These scholarships will be continued for four consecutive years, provided the local church continues its contribution and the recipient continues in good academic standing.

Young people selected to receive Youth Appreciation Scholarships may also be eligible for other types of financial assistance, depending on need. However, regardless of family income, Lycoming College will match the church's contribution toward a scholarship for its designee. Scholarship nominees will, of course, be required to meet the same admissions requirements as all other students.

The Lycoming College Report is not published in July or August. The next issue will probably reach you in late September. If you have any ideas as to how we can improve it--and there must be many--let us hear from you before the end of August.

In the meantime, have a good summer, a delightful vacation, or whatever other activity makes you happy.

Summer Groups

Keep Campus Lively

More than 5,000 persons, representing a variety of groups and organizations, will be using the Lycoming College facilities normally vacant during the 1976 summer months when students are on vacation, according to William L. Baker, business manager.

Most of the groups are scheduled to spend 2 to 5 days on campus, where they will sleep in the dormitories, dine in the college cafeteria, and meet for sessions in the school classrooms and lecture halls.

Registration is expected to range from the anticipated 125 for the Central Pennsylvania Conference Methodist Women School of Missions to the 275 junior and senior high school students who will attend each of two cheer-leading clinics. Also, several groups with anticipated enrollment considerably smaller will use only the meeting room facilities on a daily basis.

More than 250 were here for the initial session which began Thursday, May 20, when Miss Pennsylvania National Teenager Pageant contestants and their parents were on campus for four days. The next group will not arrive until June 12 when 200 will attend the Lycoming Emergency Medical Services two-day session. The annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Branch of the Postal Supervisors will attract 250 from June 16-20, and 150 will attend the Pine Creek Camps from June 20-25.

More than 250 will be on campus from June 23-26 for the annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Parent-Teacher Association, and an additional 150 will attend the Methodist School of Evangelism from July 5-9. The International Cheerleading Foundation clinic will attract 275 on each of two consecutive weeks beginning July 11 and 18, and 175 delegates will arrive on July 25 to attend the week-long Central Pennsylvania Conference Methodist Women School of Missions. An additional 250 will be enrolled for a weekend session of the school of missions from July 30 through August 1.

The final two groups will include 150 for a drill team clinic from August 8-12, and 250 are scheduled for the Northeast Jurisdictional Music School from August 15-20.

In addition to the conferences and clinics by outside organizations, the college will conduct four orientation sessions for incoming freshmen and their parents. More than 1,000 are expected to participate in the four sessions scheduled for June 27-29, June 30-July 2, August 4-6, and August 8-10.

The human brain is a wonderful organ that starts working the moment you are born and never stops until you stand up to speak in public.

Whatever the cause, however, the facts that shape present and future higher education are difficult for the individual institution to bear. The effects are falling with particular severity upon independent and church-related colleges. The student supply nationally has begun to dip and will materially diminish over the next eighteen years. More and more parents (and students) are looking to their state tax-dollars to reduce the cost of higher education; therefore, they turn directly to the lower priced services provided at tax-supported institutions. Even though the economy may be improving, inflation is a more potent factor in determining a student's choice of colleges and in its impact upon our operating costs. Going to higher education has not by any means kept pace with inflation; indeed, higher education has slipped lower on the priority lists of those who traditionally contribute to liberal arts and church-related colleges.

Although the year 1980 is the clear point of convergence for many of the national and economic forces which will affect higher education adversely, I am optimistic (and realistic) about Lycoming's future--if all segments of the college work together harmoniously on the basis of realistic factual analysis and goals. Institutions such as Lycoming will otherwise "eat themselves up" in the effort to find out who's to blame, beating their breasts and crying "Why me?" Significant and painful adjustments to these new days must continue to be made and the institution must be able to count on all its people to do their best in a team effort.

My optimism for the future of Lycoming is based upon several aspects of the institution:

- (1) Its fiscal situation has been characterized recently by proper restraint and by careful planning.
- (2) Its academic program is sound and forward-looking, needing sensitivity to career needs with its essential mission in the liberal arts.
- (3) Its student life programs and emphases have been responsive to societal changes and, at the same time, have retained an important central core of value judgments.
- (4) It has been able to make the necessary "hard decisions" while following wide consultative practices to assure maximum input and understanding.
- (5) It has generally accepted the necessary differentiation of functions, with the result that trustees have determined policy, administrators have made the necessary decisions, faculty have been free to teach, and students have had opportunity to learn.

Nine Area Students Win Bicentennial Scholarships

Nine students from six high schools in Lycoming County have been awarded $1,000 Bicentennial Scholarships to Lycoming College and will enroll for the 1976-77 academic year.

Three of the scholarship recipients are from Williamsport High School, and two attend East Lycoming Area High School at Hughesville. Four other county high schools having one recipient each are Jersey Shore, Montoursville, South Williamsport, and Montgomery.

Williamsport students include James M. Gheen, of R.D. 2, Thomas G. Stavoy, of 2335 Jonston Place, and Gil A. Johnson, of 433 Poplar Street. East Lycoming Area High School recipients are Rickey A. Adams, of Hughesville R.D. 2, and Richard P. Driver, Jr., of 240 Water Street, Hughesville.

Other scholarship winners are from South Williamsport Area High School, Laurie J. Leisher, of Williamsport R. D. 3, Montoursville High School, Sandy Lee Musheno, of 1019 Spruce Street, Montoursville, Montgomery High School, Stephen R. Starr, of Montgomery R. D. 2, and Jersey Shore High School, Susan K. West, of Jersey Shore R. D. 1.

Seniors from any of the nine high schools in the county were eligible to compete for the scholarships awarded by the college in recognition of the Bicentennial and the historic relationship between Lycoming College and the community.

Each recipient will receive $1,000 toward the reduction of tuition at Lycoming, and the scholarships will be renewable for each year the student is in full-time attendance and maintains a 3.0 grade point average. The scholarships are granted regardless of financial need.

CLASS news

Edited by DALE V. BOWEN '59

1926

We have apologized to HELEN BITTNER SMITH for omitting her name in the caption under the class of 1926 reunion picture in the last Lyncing College Reporter.

1927

CLARENCE T. BRINCOFF has been honored by having an award established in his name. The following is quoted from the "Pennsylvania Career" magazine at Penna. Hospital: "Retired member of the obstetrics and gynecology staff of Penna. Hospital, former instructor at University of Pennsylvania honored by establishment of an award in his name, to be presented annually to the practitioner of obstetrics and gynecology at Penna. Hospital who performs excellent medical care of the high ethnic, moral and medical standards achieved by Dr. Brincoff." Dr. Brincoff lives at Hillton Hill, SC.

1931

WILLIAM J. TERPAGHA lives in Augusta, Ga. He is employed at Fort Gordon. BILL and his wife were back to the campus for Alumni Day this year.

PAULINE W. BOHLE of Reading, PA, returned for the Alumni Banquet on May 1. Pauline is retired as superintendent of schools in Reading, and is now doing considerable public speaking and traveling. From his days at the Seminary, he remembers with some fondness that at the P.C. he met an elderly hospital fellow, Dr. Harry S. Hart.

J. BRUCE W. VILPOT is living in Reading, Pa. He is a member of the First United Methodist Church and is in the Board of Directors of Albany Township, a United Methodist Church in the same town. Bruce reports that he and his wife Russell entered the Seminary together in September of 1925 and in coming classes transferred to the Seminary. They were then separated and returned to it in 44 years and the fall of 1973 when they realized that they were both living in Reading, Pa., both members of the same United Methodist Church and even to have a high school classmate in the same town. Each of them has a wife and a daughter. Both are still in the same vocation as a professor at Albany Township in a United Methodist Church. He is a member of the Board of Directors at that church, as well as being a member of the Board of Directors at the First United Methodist Church in Reading, Pa. He and his wife have four children, three sons and one daughter. He is a member of the Board of Directors at that church, as well as being a member of the Board of Directors at the First United Methodist Church in Reading, Pa.

WILLIAM E. BRIDGES lives in Chambersburg, Pa. He is a present trustee for the National Life Insurance Co. He has two sons and one daughter and four grand-children.

CONSTANCE E. DEBBERSBAUGH is a member of the First United Methodist Church in Reading, Pa. She is a member of the Board of Directors of the National Life Insurance Co. She has two sons and one daughter and four grand-children.

DAVID M. BROWN lives in Reading, Pa. He is a member of the Board of Directors of the National Life Insurance Co. He has two sons and one daughter and four grand-children.

EDWARD E. KLEPPER is a member of the First United Methodist Church in Exeter, Pa. He is a member of the Board of Directors of the National Life Insurance Co. He has two sons and one daughter and four grand-children.

EMERSON H. MANNING lives in South Hill, Pa. He is a member of the Board of Directors of the National Life Insurance Co. He has two sons and one daughter and four grand-children.

RICHARD S. ENTERLINE lives in Ashland, Pa., where he is a lawyer. He is active in Kiwanis Club and is a visiting nurse association director. He enjoys golf, hunting and painting. The Enterlines have two daughters and a son. Their daughter, Debbie, graduated from Lyncing in the Class of 1976.

MARTHA LOWDERMEIK KNUDSON lives in Norwath, NY. She is a personnel manager with Lewis Engineering Company of Norwath. Martha is active in civic affairs and enjoys gardening and bowling. She and her husband, Louis, have one daughter.

JEAN MUMFORD SPENCER and her husband, Sheldon, live in New Paltz, NY. They have two sons. Jean is a housewife and secretary-bookkeeper at a nursing home near her home. From her days on campus, she remembers President Harding's English. In retrospect, she says "We never had it good!"

1940

PHYLLIS GLADWATER HARRACH and her husband, MAX '47, live in Naperville, IL, where she is a librarian. They have three daughters and one granddaughter. They enjoy riding their horse, woods, birds, wild flowers and collecting wooden toys. She invites any alumni in the Chicago area to all her at 357-2088.

OTTO L. SONDER, JR., is a Professor of Sociology and Anthropology at Hartwick College, Oneonta, NY. He is an architect and painter and has many memories of his days at Lyncing as a student and as a faculty member.

BIRTH MOYERS GALLAGHER and her husband, Bob, live in Newark, DE. They have two sons, one daughter and a grandson. Ruth is employed in sales with Kennard's Department Store.

STANLEY F. KNICK, JR., is a clergyman in the United Methodist Church. He has been assigned to Baltimore for the last two years for an intensive research and development experiment in local church development.

1951

WARREN L. BAUGHMAN, JR., is a lotterist superintendent in the Central Pennsylvania Conference of the United Methodist Church. He and his wife, Doris, live in New Cumberland, PA. They have a son and a daughter. Their son, Ross, graduated from Lyncing in 1973.

HELEN P. HOHN-KECHT, JR., and her husband, the former MARY KELLER '49, live in Hughesville, Pa. They have two sons. Helen is branch claim manager of Selected Risk Insurance Co. He is a member of the First United Methodist Church and other local church organizations.

PEGGY S. METZGER BUCK and her husband, Wilfred, live in Williamsport. They have two sons and a daughter. Peggy enjoys her vocation as a teacher. Percy enjoys tennis and church activities.

ELIZABETH MENTZ, and her wife, Irma, live in York, Pa. They have two sons. Elizabeth is the manager of forecasting and market statistics in the York Division of the Warner, Inc. She recalls her senior year life in the "Angel Factory."

RICHARD E. SMYK and his wife, Miriam, live in Williamsport. They have two sons. Richard is fourth grade teacher in the Williamsport School District. He is a member of the Lyncing Class of 1951. He is active in civic and church activities and is a member of the Pennsylvania Dental Society. He is also active in bi-terrestrial activities and photography.

BARBARA J. EMMER and her wife, Ann, live in Bradford, Pa. They have two sons and a daughter. Barbara is purchasing manager of a local department store. Ann is a member of the Lyncing Class of 1951. She is active in civic and church activities.

LEON E. SIMPSON, and his wife, Wilton, will be celebrating their 50th wedding anniversary in July. They have two daughters and a son. Leon is plant manager at Shrewsbury Brothers Co., 1932.

HARVEY S. WALKER has been named as assistant to the Director of Commonwealth Bank in that capacity. He is a member of the Lyncing Class of 1951. He is active in civic and church activities.

Do you enjoy reading the Class Notes? Most alumni report that they do. Many of the news notes in this issue are the result of reunion year questionnaires which were sent to all whose class year ended in '1 or '6'. Don't be afraid to blow your own horn. If you don't, we won't be able to either. Black and white photos are welcome. We reserve the right to edit all information received. (Note: we do not print engagement announcements or names of alumni who attended a particular wedding but were not members of the wedding party.) Notes on employment promotions and honors received are especially welcome. Address all class notes to the Alumni Office.

ALUMNI ASSOCIATION ELECTION RESULTS

Under the new constitution (adopted May, 1975), the above election was conducted by mail ballot sent to all alumni of record. Ballots returned to the College, postmarked on or before April 23, 1976, were counted by a group of authorized tellers.

Congratulations to the alumni elected! The College is appreciative of your willingness to serve your alma mater in this leadership capacity. All alumni are encouraged to communicate constructive ideas to these representative alumni for the betterment of the association.

CORRECTION

When the 1976 honor graduates were published in the commencement program, the name of Nancy Marie Schweikert was inadvertently omitted. Nancy should have been listed as the 22nd magna cum laude graduate. Nancy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dick Schaeffer of Schuylkill Haven, PA, majored in accounting.

RICHMOND BROTHERS FORM KEYBOARD ORCHESTRA

FRANK '69, NORMAN '72 and DENNIS '73 RICHMOND have formed the "Richmond Brothers Keyboard Orchestra" and are embarking on a cross-country concert tour of their original style music. The brothers believe that their music will appeal to all ages. It is a unique blend of classical, jazz and rock. Frank is the group's main composer and arranger. The trio uses some 20 pieces of equipment, including piano, virginal (a harpsichord-type instrument), amplifiers, speakers, synthesizers and other electronic gear. By using tapes which they have pre-recorded, the trio sounds like a big keyboard orchestra as they play along with their live music.

Frank and Dennis continue to teach privately and Norman's "side job" is leading the New World Consort—a 12-piece chamber music group based in Newburgh. They are living in Cornwall-on-Hudson, NY. Their parents are Logan and ELOISA '69 RICHMOND Logan is chairman of the accounting department at Lycoming.

"Why is the Pennsylvania State Police helicopter landing on the campus?" No, it's not a raid, but rather an informative demonstration by some friendly policemen for classes at St. Boniface Elementary School. The quad is an excellent landing pad.

A documentary which he made for the National Geographic Society is scheduled for TV on December 1, 1976. More details about it will be published later.

"In Lieu of Flowers" . . .

Some alumni, upon the occasion of the passing of a loved one or friend, suggest in the obituary column that individuals who wish to honor a deceased person, do it by making a gift to Lycoming College, in place of sending flowers or other remembrances.

This is a tangible and lasting tribute to the deceased, in support of Lycoming College's education objectives. For additional information, contact the Director of Alumni Affairs or the Director of Development, Lycoming College, Williamsport, PA 17701
